Lost at Sea

Underneath the surface of the sea
A world of chaos and mystery
Currents push and pull, like a tide
In my mind, thoughts collide

A whirlpool of worry and fear
A storm that's been raging for years
I try to keep my head above water
But sometimes I falter

I reached out for a helping hand
Someone to pull me up to the land
But as I looked around, I found
I'm lost in a sea of sound

I saw a lighthouse, shining bright
A beacon of hope in the darkest night
I tried to swim, but the waves crashed
I felt so helpless, so unabashed

As the storm rages on and on
I remember a song, a distant throng
A cry for help, a voice that sings
And with it, my heart takes wings

I may be lost in the depths of the sea
But with that voice, I can break free
I'll keep swimming towards the light
And one day, I'll reach the shore in sight

For her skills, she has shown extraordinary creativity in her poetry writing, creating dozens of profound, insightful works on a range of topics (see below). As a volunteer, she has shown outstanding commitment to her community by volunteering to work with refugee children from the Rohingya community, organising a host of exciting games, crafts and team building activities. Maya's reflection on how this led her to grow as a more compassionate and considerate person is a testament to the value of her endeavour.

On the adventurous journey she displayed resilience and humour, enduring the cold and rain and successfully whipping up a tasty chicken curry despite the torrential conditions. She reflected on the trip as a memorable and character-building experience that strengthened her collaboration, problem-solving, and communication skills, whilst also describing her intense relief and sense of accomplishment when they finally reached the coach to take them home. The development of these skills and qualities are an important step in her journey to being Future Ready.

Thoughts

What is the meaning of life, can anyone say?
Why do we dream, and what do they convey?
Does fate exist, or is everything random?
What happens when we die, is it the end or a tandem?

Why do we love, and what makes us hate?
Can we control our destiny or is it just fate?
What is the universe expanding into, and where does it end?
Do aliens exist, and will they ever be our friend?

How do we find peace in a world filled with strife?
Is ignorance really bliss, or just an excuse for a lack of life?
Can we truly know ourselves, and who we are meant to be?
Why do we keep searching for answers, when there's no guarantee?

Are we alone in this universe, or part of something bigger?
Why do we fear the unknown, and the unfamiliar whisper?
What makes us happy, and what causes us to feel pain?
Will we ever find answers, or are we destined to remain in vain?
